What's New in the Andy 039;s Browser?

------------------ This is a demo application for a simple bookmark manager. It uses the sqlite library to store bookmarks in a SQLite database. It allows the user to add new bookmarks and edit existing ones. The default filename of bookmarks is "saved.sqlite". It will be stored in the following location: C:\Documents and Settings\andy\My Documents\My App\Bookmarks\ Input: ------------------ Simply add a bookmark by clicking on the add button in the toolbar or by dragging-dropping a bookmark from another browser to the window. The user can also edit existing bookmarks. Output: ------------------ The following buttons will be shown: - Remove: Remove a bookmark - Move Up: Move a bookmark to the top of the list - Move Down: Move a bookmark to the bottom of the list - Sort Up: Sort the list of bookmarks by name - Sort Down: Sort the list of bookmarks by URL - Search: Search the bookmarks for a particular string Compiling: ------------------ You can compile the application by pressing the "compile" button. It will create a new executable named "andy.exe". The executable can be run by double-clicking on it. You can also run it by using the "Run as / Native executable" menu option in the "start" menu. Running on other computers: ----------------------------- Simply extract the contents of the zip archive to a directory. Then double-click on the executable to run it. Using Andy's Browser ------------------------ 1. Go to to download it. 2. Create a shortcut to the executable. 3. You can also browse the Internet by opening the "Browser" window and double-clicking on any of the bookmarks. Copyright (c) 2010, Andy Pratt License: GNU General Public License version 2 The present invention relates to a portable wireless computer adapted to be carried around by a user, and more particularly to a portable wireless computer which allows the user to operate the computer from a place where the user is not carrying the computer, without disturbing an operation performed by the user at a position at which the computer is placed. The compact and light weight configuration of a wireless computer is desired from the viewpoint of carrying convenience. However, there is a problem that, when the wireless computer is placed at a position at which it can be accessed by the user, the user is required to stand near the computer and operate the computer from a position near the computer, or to be disturbed in an operation performed by the user. Accordingly, it is an object of the present invention to provide a wireless computer which allows the user to operate the computer
