This guide will take you through the most common tricks for protecting your PC from unwanted junk: Beware of phishing scams Phishing, also known as social engineering, is an online con that is based on tricking users into thinking that they are going to receive some good news or gift, when in fact it is an attempt to hack into a user's personal information, login details or funds. Most of the time, such information is retrieved by sending a user an email that requests for some information or demands the payment of a fee. Such emails may claim to be from trustworthy sources like banks, online shops, social media or a forum or may use a fake name, making it hard for the victim to identify the genuine sender. The main purpose of phishing is to steal login details and other personal information of the targeted user. There are multiple ways for the scammers to collect a user's personal information and can be as simple as a single click or as complicated as a scam that requires various steps of actions to complete. The scammers may collect the information in the following ways: With help of your social media account: Phishers can use
