I am speaking at a conference where people are asking, “How can the West survive?” The West is not in good shape. We are in bad shape. I am on this stage because the West is in bad shape. I am not here to talk about why the West is in bad shape. I am not here to talk about the causes of this. I am not here to talk about a grand theory. I am here to talk about how we can reverse our decline. The problem with the West is not the “West,” which is still a global phenomenon that includes all the countries that are in the so-called West. The problem with the West is the very specific countries that make up the “West,” which include the U.S., the U.K., Germany, France and other European countries, and Canada and Australia. These countries have a particular economic structure that has led to a very particular political system that, as we will see, is at odds with the rest of the world. These countries are doing well. They have a lot of wealth and power. They have more wealth and power than they have ever had before, and more than they have ever had before in the history of the world. The problem is that the wealth and power is being created in a society that is in trouble, and these countries are not realizing that. We are in a new paradigm of capitalism. If you want f988f36e3a
