And the fact that the judge isn't going to jail the Top Gear boys doesn't make me feel any less triumphant. What an honor to be giving out those kinds of injunctions. The Mercedes deal? At this point, I feel that I'm on the outs with our entire circle of trust. I have been consistently beaten down by the German supercar business. And now I'm being told by my friends that I've been turned against my friends. I'm not sure which one is worse. Meanwhile, the Daily Mail has gotten wind of all the "secret recording" and managed to get a hold of one of them. I have to admit, it's a pretty good write up. I mean, they managed to pull it off from a flight. It's really a testament to the brilliance of their sources. But there's one thing I don't think they managed to get hold of: the most hilarious side of Jeremy Clarkson. The most recent recording came before Clarkson's "bus incident", which I sincerely hope was a fluke. That's what I like to call it: The Big Fluke. The thing that makes Jeremy Clarkson's brain appear on f988f36e3a
